Historical Sketch

Clatsop Plains Church, oldest continuing Presbyterian Church west of the Rockies was organized September 19, 1846, - twelve years before Oregon was admitted to statehood on February 14, 1859

William Henry Gray came west with the Whitman-Spalding party of Presbyterian Church in 1836. Soon after he became one of the first settlers of the Clatsop Plains district, - Rev. Lewis Thompson had been ordained in the "Upper Missouri" Presbytery in 1845. He was the first religious worker in the Coastal North West. Arriving here in the fall of 1846 he was asked to preach a sermon in the home of the Grays. Immediately after the Service he organized the Church with Alva Condit as Ruling Elder and Mr. and Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Condit as charter members. Mr. Condit having been ordained an Elder in "Missouri". Mr. Thompson ministered to the Church for 22 years.

The original church building was erected in 1850 at a cost of $2500. on a tract of land (10 acres) donated by Mr. and Mrs. R.W. Morrison. That building was destroyed in a storm. The present beautiful brick structure was built on the site of the first, largely the gift of Mrs. Jacob Kamm in memory of her parents, the W.H. Grays. Immediately back of the church is the Pioneer Cemetery, as old as the Church itself, where rest the original settlers and their immediate descendants.
